Chicago Grain and Produce. CHICAGO, May 22.-Liquidation of long wheat was the distinguishing feature of the market during the greater part of the time today. The opening was about 1/c higher than the closing figures of yester day, eased off later about %c, then rallied %c, but under increased speculative offerings became weak, prices declining \(\)e,rallied ice, again declined ic, ralifed and r the regular session about %c lower than yesterday; that is for July, which was the leading feature. On the afternoon board there was a spurt leaving the final figures of the day Mc higher than vesterday at 87%c. The weather was fine for the growing crop and also fine for farm work. The official crop report received today from the Illinois gricaral report, reports the ondition of the growing winter wheat as 67 per cent against 57 per cent, as reported by the government May 10. The speculative offerings were large and although there were reactions from the several declines, each advance was met with renewed selling, though at 86% for July the lecline was apparently checked by good buying whether from reports or investment, it was difficult to state. It was quite likely in the interest of some parties who had sold at the highest prices. Export clearances were but a few thousand bushels at Philadelphia, with nothing at New York, No American wheat has reached Liverpool for several days and brenk on this side. In the corn pit there was better trade than yes Several receiving houses were taking a hand. The story was going the rounds that the clique are bringing in their corn which they own in the country on account of the facilities for shipping which Chicago affords. Corn by lake and canal can be laid down in New York for H 5%c. The blackboard on 'Change shows that Chicago is receiving practically all the corn that is moving, and this and other features bears out the story. For the great part of the time the market was rather firm; July which sold off on the early break to 54%c, improved to 55%c, eased off to 54%c, and after various fluctuations closed at 55%c, a little higher than last night.

Cash oats were easier and 14000fc lower. They did not go doen yesterday quite so much as futures. Today there was a reaction from yesterday's decline in the speculative market. There were not so many rellers and a fair demand existed to cover shorts. As compared with yesterday's later prices there was about 14c advance. For May the advance was well maintained but June and July reacted while new crop deliveries closed 1/201/c better.

Light receipts of hogs and a firm market produced a steadier feeling on cured products, and although trading was fair early it became light toward midday. Offerings of product were not large and a firmer un dertone developed. Closing sales showed an advance of 106:123 c on lard, but only 2% in pork. A better demand existed for May pork and sales were at 2% premium The leading futures ranged as follows:

& Constantinople Correspondent Describe Some Remarkable Ceremonials-Bow ing Low to the Name of the Prophet Short Seasons of Prayer-Sad Faces.

But to return to the dervish chapel which I was describing. A deep gallery runs around six sides of the large room. On the side next Mecca, where the high priest sits, is a small but lefty pulpit, reached by a narrow flight of steps. Besides this you observe a portion of the gallery is partitioned off and highly Aftorneys and Consulors at Law. Office 16 and tt. Feel theimer block, Wichita, Kan. ornamented. dlib-lm*. name of the prophet in large letters of gold on a dark green ground. The high pricet's sent is simply a crimson rug, where he sits cross legged, wrapped in a loose green cloak with wide flowing sleeves. The musicians are stationed in the gallery directly opposite the high priest.

It is an impressive sight when the dervishes enter slowly, in single file, the little gate of the inclosure, with their long light brown cloaks wrapped about them, concealing their hands. They first bow low to the name of DE, W. A. MINIOR, General Practice, Surgery & Obstetrics the prophet, then with step keeping time to the music from the gallery, which fills the room with its low monotonous strains, they Homeopathists, At 130 N. Now the high priest ises and delivers an audible prayer; the others remain motionless with hands still folded on the breast. At the close of the grayer all bow their heads to the ground, and weird, barbaric melody peals forth from Drs. Oldham and Graham have moved their ffice from No. 24 E. the gallery.

Instantly the brethren all join in the chorus. The effect is indescrible. Now the sound dies away till it is but as the whisper of the winds ing the pines, then it again bursts forth with an energy that appears almost super-natural, followed by another stillness of about a minute for silent prayer. When the low strains are again heard they all rise and slowly follow the high priest three times around the room. With arms still reverently folded upon the breast they bow twice to the hame of the prophet—first on the side by which they approach, then on the side op-posite-which they manage to accomplish very gracefully without once turning their backs upon the sacred name by slowly revolving upon the right foot. The procession is closed by a second prostration. When each has gained his place he throws aside his cloak and begins the series of remarkable evolutions which has given them the name of "dancing" or "whirling" dervishes. Meaningless as it all seems to us, to them ever rite has a deep significance. Their rapid todary motion symbolizes the notion of the universe, their low weird mn ic the music of the spheres.

Their dress consists of a loose shirt-inchet and full long skirt of light brown cloth. The right side of the jacket is fastened to the girdle, the left hangs loose. The skirt is laid in deep plaits beneath the girdle. Their rapid revolutions give these full garments a bell shaped appearance, some of the most expert among them making their skirts stand almost at right angles with the body. The speciacle utterly baffles description. Although the space was somewhat circum-scribed they never once interfered with each other's locomotion, but round and round they spun, as if impelled by an unseen power; their eyes half closed, their heads bent toward the right, their pale, thin, pas-sionless faces perfectly immobile, though great bends of perspiration were soon standing on their brows.

If for any reason one of them made a sud-den pause, his garments wound about him in a singular manner. Three times they all paused for prayer, then resumed the rapid motion, with one hand held upward to re-ceive the expected blessings, the other extended downward to scatter them abroad. Finally they resumed their sents on the strip of matting, bathed in perspiration, when one of the brethren, who had seemed simply a N Main st., or lock box 73. J. A. McMahan, Sups. spectator, covered each with his mantle. Then a dervish whose sent was at the left of the high priest's delivered a long prayer, in a solemn but rapid manner, the last word of each section being greatly prolonged. This prayer was for the great ones of their order, the dervishes bowing reverently as each holy name was uttered. When at dength the name of the prophet occurred they prostrated themselves on the ground. While they were thus prostrate the chief priest rose to his knees, delivered a short prayer, then took his stand upon the crimsonirug. The priests ap-EYE, EAR AND SURGICAL

As no seats are allowed we stood fully an hour and a half, every moment expecting to see some exhibition of religious ecstasy, but saw nothing of the kind. All the dervishes looked weary and sad and all were very thin except an African, whose extra avoirdu-pois, together with the violent exercise, soon brought him to a "melting mood" and he retired to his seat looking but little like one inspired with scraphic visions.
